Horus is the god of the sky, He is probably most well-known as the protector of the ruler of Egypt. The Egyptians believed that the pharaoh was the 'living Horus'. The ancient Egyptians had many different beliefs about the god Horus. One of the most common beliefs was that Horus was the son of Isis and Osiris. After Osiris was murdered by his brother Seth, Horus fought with Seth for the throne of Egypt. In this battle, Horus lost one of his eyes. The eye was restored to him and it became a symbol of protection for the ancient Egyptians. After this battle, Horus was chosen to be the ruler of the world of the living. One of the best- preserved temples in Egypt is today dedicated to Horus. It is located in the upper town of Egypt in a town called Edfu.

Egyptian God or Goddess

Name: Anubis

Anubis is the inventor and God of embalming and mummification and he guided the dead through the underworld. He also was the guardian of scales and weighed people's heart and souls.

Anubis had a head of a jackal with a mans body or was sometimes found as a complete jackal. Also his daughter (Kebechet) was found as his assistant most of the time. The reason he was so important was because the Ancient Egyptians worshiped two things the most the first the Gods and the second thing death and they worshiped him because he picked their fate in the after life. Also he was replaced by Osiris in his role as God of the under world in 2055 BC. He also watched over the dead that is why he had a jackal head because jackels were often found in cemeteries.
